ADMH AUTISM SERVICES

Intensive Care Coordination:

Identification, coordination, and monitoring of an array of supports through needs assessment, case planning, service arrangement, social support, re-assessment, and follow-up/monitoring by a single case manager.

Behavior Support:

Development and monitoring of a behavior support plan designed to diminish, extinguish, or improve specific behaviors. The behavior therapist coordinates and trains others to implement the plan as well as provide crisis management.

Therapeutic Mentoring:

Support, coaching, and training for an individual in age-appropriate behaviors, interpersonal communication, problem solving, conflict resolution, and relating appropriately to peers and adults.

In-Home Therapy:

Treatment of the individual's behavioral and mental health needs, to include effective support to enhance the family's ability to improve the individual's functioning in the home and community.

Peer Support

Promotion of socialization, self-advocacy, development of natural supports, and maintenance of community living skills. Peer specialists encourage participation in service planning, engaging supports, improving self-management, decision making, and navigating child-serving agencies.

Psychoeducational Services:

Training to help individuals and families understand nature of diagnosis and effective strategies to maintain meaningful engagement in the community.

For Medicaid-eligible children and youth with autism ages birth through 20 that require more intensive supports
